Robert De Niro engages in 'Lies' as Bernie Madoff in new HBO movie

By Jay Bobbin

A story can be so big, more than one television project vies to tell it.

So it is in the case of Bernie Madoff, the financier and investment adviser whose client-bilking Ponzi scheme — using new investors' money to pay returns to previous investors — inspired a Richard Dreyfuss-starring ABC miniseries last year. Now, fellow Oscar winner Robert De Niro reteams with his "Wag the Dog" and "Sleepers" director Barry Levinson to give their version of the saga (co-written by Levinson's son Sam) as the HBO film "The Wizard of Lies" premieres Saturday, May 20.

Based principally on the Diana B. Henriques book "The Wizard of Lies: Bernie Madoff and the Death of Trust," with added material from Laurie Sandell's "Truth and Consequences," the drama also considers the impact of the fraud on Madoff's family life. Michelle Pfeiffer plays his wife Ruth, with Alessandro Nivola and Nathan Darrow ("House of Cards") as their sons, Mark and Andrew. Kristen Connolly (also of "House of Cards" as well as "Zoo"), Lily Rabe and Hank Azaria ("Brooklyn") also appear.

"What he did is beyond my comprehension," De Niro says of Madoff, "There's a disconnect somehow in him, and I still would like to understand. Some people just ... you can go so far (in playing them). You can do your interpretation. The only thing I do feel strongly about is that he didn't tell his kids and he didn't tell his wife (what he had done), but everyone around him probably had an idea. They just didn't want to look too deeply, because they knew something wasn't quite right."

In making his debut in an HBO movie, De Niro also is an executive producer of "The Wizard of Lies," as is his longtime production partner Jane Rosenthal.

"We had looked at doing this as a theatrical before we brought it to HBO," Rosenthal reflects, "and we realized that no studio wanted to make it. We would have had to go the independent-film route, and it was going to be a struggle to get that made. You'd have a much smaller audience seeing it as a theatrical, so as screens are all blurring and the business is so radically changing, this was the best place to make the film and to ensure that we would have an amazing audience for it."

Was John Travolta still 'Kotter's' Barbarino when he caught 'Fever'?

BY JAY BOBBIN © Zap2it

Q: The recent tribute special on the Bee Gees was great. Was John Travolta still doing "Welcome Back, Kotter" when he made "Saturday Night Fever"? — Bob McCarthy, via e-mail

A: He was, and needless to say, his success in "Fever" was a bonanza for "Kotter" for the rest of the ABC sitcom's 1977-78 season after the movie's release. As his big-screen opportunities increased immediately, his appearances on the show as Vinnie Barbarino became fewer during the next season, which proved to be the series' last. For the episodes he did, he was given "Special Guest Star" billing.

Q: I really enjoy "Superstore." Is it coming back next season? — Linda Tracy, Providence, R.I.

A: Yes. As it did for Season 2, NBC gave the show an early renewal for this fall's Season 3. The network clearly is keeping the faith in the America Ferrera-starring sitcom about the antics among staff members at Cloud 9, and last summer, it was one of very few shows used as supplemental entertainment programming while most of the NBC schedule was filled with Summer Olympics coverage. (Not surprisingly, that "Superstore" episode had an Olympic theme.)

Q: How can Carrie Coon be on "The Leftovers" and " Fargo" at the same time? — Joe Stamper, Columbus, Ohio

A: It's television magic. Actually, as we've mentioned before with other actors who have been seen in two series at once, just because they're shown at the same time doesn't mean they were filmed at the same time. It's usually easier to work out those schedules with cable shows, since they typically have fewer episodes per season than broadcast shows ... thus making the time commitment a performer needs for each job more manageable.

Q: Will Joe Mantegna and Gary Sinise host the National Memorial Day Concert again this year? — Patrick Davis, via e-mail

A: Mantegna will, and his friend Sinise has a good reason for not being present this time after more than a decade of yearly appearances ... though the latter always has told us, "If Joe is there, I'll be there." Sinise's daughter is expecting and is due that weekend, but he'll still have a presence in the PBS telecast on May 28 via a pre-recorded segment in which he tells the story of Doolittle's Raiders on its 75th anniversary. Co-hosting the event with Mantegna this time will be Laurence Fishburne, who has participated in the program before. It's appropriate that he has that role in a year when one of the show's highlights is a tribute to the Tuskegee Airmen, since Fishburne starred in a 1995 HBO movie about that group of World War II pilots.

Q: Someone told me Zoey Deutch is Lea Thompson's daughter. Is that true? — Sharon West, Stuart, Fla.

A: Indeed, it is. Currently one of the busiest young actresses in the business, the star of "Before I Fall," "Why Him?" and "Flower" worked with her mom in a couple of episodes of Freeform's now-over "Switched at Birth," and in the 2011 movie "Mayor Cupcake." She's also one of the offspring of Howard Deutch, the director of such films as "Pretty in Pink," "Some Kind of Wonderful" (which starred Thompson) and "Grumpier Old Men."

This new romantic comedy borrows a page or two (and a character’s surname) from the musical “My Fair Lady” for its premise. Taylor Cole stars as Dr. Harper Higgins, who loses the showcase visual artist she needs for a project that could be vital to her career. Discovering that her dog walker, Tom Stone (Steve Lund), is a talented amateur painter, Harper sets out to transform him into someone who can pass muster as a respected professional.

Iyanla, Fix My Life

8 p.m., 11 p.m. on OWN

In the new “Family of Lies, Part 3,” stubborn family matriarch Alicia threatens to walk away from the healing process, much as she has abandoned her six daughters’ time and time again. When Shay, Alicia’s eldest daughter, reveals yet another deep secret about her mother’s sexuality, Iyanla begins to worry that this clan may be broken beyond repair.

The Son

8 p.m. on SUND

In a flashback scene to 1849, Prairie Flower (Elizabeth Frances) feels sorely torn between love and duty in the new episode “Honey Hunt.” Moving back to the “present” of 1915, Pete (Henry Garrett) begins to grow closer to Maria (Paola Nunez), while Eli (Pierce Brosnan) decides to take Phineas (David Wilson Barnes) into his confidence regarding an explosive secret. Zahn McClarnon also stars.

Saturday Night Live

10:29 p.m. on KSHB

The show’s 42nd-season finale is hosted by someone who has a lot to celebrate: Dwayne Johnson, who’s enjoying box-office success with “The Fate of the Furious,” and whose semi-comedic movie take on “Baywatch” will have just opened when this episode airs. An outright spoof of that sand-and-surf saga isn’t out of the question here. Katy Perry returns as musical guest for the third time. This is another “SNL” installment airing live in every time zone.

Austin City Limits

“Laugh About It,” “Don’t Know What I Means,” “Right on Time” and the title tune, among others.
